tf 2958 Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

NOTICE.

THE Undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of vessels discharging at this port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their Wharves at New Harbour.

With the assistance of steam cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick godowns on the wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen, are avoided by vessels using the wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

HONGKONG, AUGUST 29TH, 1868.

A careful perusal of Mr. BURLINGAME'S speech on the eve of his departure from New York for Europe, must inevitably produce on the mind an impression that the telegraphic report, received by the last mail, to the effect that he had concluded a Treaty with the States, by which every port, river, and lake in China was thrown open to the American people, must be incorrect. Had such a Treaty been negotiated at Washington, and signed there by Mr. BURLINGAME and his colleagues on behalf of the Chinese, it is too much to suppose that he would have addressed an assembly of two hundred of the first men of the day in America in a sense precisely opposite to the terms of that Treaty, and plainly told them, as he did tell them, that China was not yet ready to take so vast a step in advance, and had sent him and his companions to obtain from the courtesy and good sense of England, France, and America a little more time, that she might fit herself for unrestrained intercourse with Western nations. Mr. BURLINGAME'S speech is in the main a truthful and sensible speech, and is consistent with the policy which, as American Minister at Pekin, he enunciated and aided to carry out—a policy of patience, forbearance, and long-suffering; of peace and goodwill; of hopefulness and of earnest desire to aid the Chinese through all their innumerable difficulties in carrying out the Treaties. Perhaps the Chinese Ambassador estimates too highly the good qualities of the Chinese, and represents them as having made greater progress than they have done in the knowledge of, and desire to profit by, our higher civilization. He speaks of the nation as if it felt with the few who really desire progress; he speaks of the Government of China as if it were practically what in theory it is supposed to be; he paints all Chinamen from the Confucian model, and in so much he has deceived his audience. But the Chinese Government and people have the elements of all the good qualities he has ascribed to them, and have capabilities, individually and as a nation, not incommensurate with his statements. China is physically as wealthy, as happily placed, as Mr. BURLINGAME represented her to be, and in years to come will not disappoint his predictions. He spoke of China and of the Chinese not quite as they are, but as he hoped to see them, with their capabilities and opportunities. Probably if any one of us were in his position, and addressing a similar audience, the temptation to make the most we could of China, and of the Chinese, would assail and conquer us also. Mr. BURLINGAME, moreover, had an object in view. He sought to elicit the sympathies of his audience, and to draw them with him when he claimed for the Chinese the patience, and forbearance of his go ahead fellow-countrymen; when he sought to make palatable to eager merchants a policy which if pursued to the end will throw many restraints, both of time and place, over foreign intercourse with China, and prolong the period of semi-seclusion, so objectionable in the eyes of many. Whether Sir FREDERICK BRUCE originated the policy Mr. BURLINGAME has so steadily supported at Pekin, or whether the latter was himself the author of it, and won over his colleagues at the Imperial Court to his views, no sensible thinking man doubts for a moment, but that a peace and patience policy in all dealings with the Chinese Government and people is the wisest, and will in the end prove the most effective. The progress of foreign ideas and of foreign influence has been slow, and subject to many checks and pauses, but it has been steady and sure. Had we taken up arms to resent the first infraction, involuntary or otherwise, of the treaties, and followed up that first blow by a succession of others, struck here and there as occasion required, China would still be a hot-bed of rebellion, a scene of constant warfare and struggle external and internal, and an object of ambition to every nation with power enough to grasp a square mile of territory. Trade and Commerce would simply have vanished in the turmoil and confusion of constant strife. There are people in China who advocate this latter policy, who would open China by force, split it up into pieces, and cast one to Russia, one to England, one to France, one to America. Some of the public Journals have taken up this line, and would have the Treaty powers play the tyrant, and cry "booty." Against these, no matter what their nationality, BURLINGAME directed his speech, and properly so. The policy of such men is a senseless, blind, and suicidal policy, and happily for them and for China, neither England, France, nor America is likely to adopt it.

A letter in the London Daily News, dated July 10th, and signed W. H. C., commenting on Mr. BURLINGAME'S speech, charges that gentleman with making it the object of his mission to limit the operation of the Treaties, and diminish sure freedom of intercourse with the Chinese and the interior of China. The writer of that letter ought to read Mr. BURLINGAME'S speeches over again. His object is not to limit the operation of the Treaties with China, but to extend their operation hereafter by preventing too strong a pressure on the Chinese at this moment, when they are ill-prepared to bear it, and when little or no benefit could be derived from carrying out the Treaty in its amplest sense. It has been and still is the policy of England to do what Mr. BURLINGAME now seeks to do, that is, to help the Chinese in every way to the fulfilment of their Treaty obligations in the manner most advantageous to themselves and to us; and with that view to give them time and material help, and where possible to ease the more stringent provisions of the Treaties, to meet the circumstances of China in its Government and people.

A "Resident of seventeen years in China" defends "us" from the charge of supporting a tyrannical policy, which would involve not only China, but would involve others in bloody wars, a charge laid at somebody's door by Mr. BURLINGAME in his speech at New York. This "Resident" addresses himself to the Times. If by "us," he means the English nation, Mr. BURLINGAME never in any one of his speeches charged them with sustaining a tyrannical policy. He could not and did not do it. His policy of conciliation originated, we believe, with the late EARL OF ELGIN was inaugurated and carried out by Sir FREDERICK BRUCE, and since by his successor, and Mr. BURLINGAME has the merit of having seen the wisdom of such a policy, of having adopted it and steadily adhered to it throughout his career. If by "us" Resident means merchants in China of all nationalities, the charge, if made against a large section of them, is founded on truth, and his denial is not worth the paper it is written on. He may not have been one of the party, but he ought to know, and must know of its existence, and he should not ignore it in his communication to a journal like the Times.

On the whole, Mr. BURLINGAME'S speech to the citizens of New York is in the main worthy of study and of approval, although in style it is better suited for the atmosphere of New York than of London.

Police Intelligence, 28th August.

BEFORE E. W. GOODLAKE, ESQ.

The charges were very few this morning, and were devoid of public interest with one or two exceptions. Shortly after his Worship took his seat, Dr. Murray came up to the Court, and informed Mr. Goodlake that he had a case which was really of public importance. He had had many complaints from Chinese, of their being beaten by Sikh policemen, but this morning his own servant while going to the Ice House with the book and Ice blanket, was stopped by a Sikh constable, who not only took the boy in charge for the unlawful possession of his (the Doctor's) blanket, but beat the man unmercifully, so much so that he was unfit to work at present. He had asked for the Sikh to be put on the charge sheet this morning, but Inspector Horspool said Mr. Creagh would settle the matter. He did not think it was a matter for Mr. Creagh to settle, as it was not a breach of police discipline.

Mr. Goodlake said the rule of always bringing a constable before the superintendent of police in the first instance, was a good one. But with regard to the case, it was only another example of the uselessness of the Sikh police. They never were intended for police, although they made very good soldiers. It is not possible for them to understand the Chinese, as they had difficulty in making themselves understood in anything but their own dialect. They were a remarkably stupid lot, and as policemen incapable.

Shortly after, the Sikh, 348, was brought before his Worship, and Mr. Creagh also attended the court. The evidence of the chair-coolie of Dr. Murray is original; he said this morning, about five o'clock, he was passing by the German Club on the way to the Ice-house, having the blanket and book in hand, when he saw the Sikh constable sitting in a chair which was on the ground outside the Club. The Sikh called to him to come and show him what he had under his arm. He went up to the constable, who at the same time rose from the chair, seized him by the tail, and dragged him to the station, at the same time beating him with a staff. (Witness took off his jacket, and showed one mark on the ribs.)

Inspector Horspool was on duty at the station when the Sikh came up, and wished to charge the complainant with the unlawful possession of the blanket. On hearing the case, he, the inspector, had dismissed the charge. Complainant, however, would not leave the station as he evidently wanted Dr. Murray to come up, and charge the constable, it being inspection day by the Doctor of the force.

Defendant (who seemed in some trepidation as to the result) said he was not sitting in a chair, but he merely went up and asked the coolie what he had. The man abused him, and insisted on being taken to the station. He had never struck him at all. He had not been on duty in the morning in Wyndham-street before, so did not know that it was usual for coolies to go for ice with blankets at an early hour. Mr. Creagh and the Jemidar both stated that the defendant bore a very fair character.

Mr. Goodlake said he was sorry that the Sikh could not tell the truth. The complainant had no doubt overstated the injuries received, and was just as capable of carrying Dr. Murray as before, although he pretended not to be able to. The Sikh had no right whatever to strike the complainant, and would therefore be fined $2. His Worship at the same time thanked Dr. Murray for coming forward in the case on behalf of the public.

No. 348 was then led away in silent wonder at the decision, and the chair-cooli left the court, declaring he was so bad that they would have to get a substitute to carry the Doctor.

A CLEARED-OUT GAMBLER.

A Chinaman was charged with "loafing" in a gambling-house and assaulting the watchman.

George Finch, a watchman at a gambling house, described how the defendant, who was a "loafer" in the gambling house, assaulted him when he was putting the fellow out of the house. Defendant had no money of his own, but was in the habit of "sneaking" into the house, and borrowing small sums from lucky gamblers.

Mr. Goodlake said he did not think the owners of the house could put the defendant out for standing about and not playing at the tables. Very likely the defendant had been cleaned out at the tables, and having no more money the people of the house wanted to turn him out. Defendant discharged.

The Hongkong Chamber of Commerce to Mr. Hart.

The following letter has been addressed by the Hongkong Chamber to Mr. Hart, in reply to his circular despatch of July 20:—

HONGKONG GENERAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Hongkong, 26th August, 1868.

SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your despatch No. 86, dated Pekin, 20th July, which had been perused with much pleasure by the Committee, and beg to convey to you the thanks of the Chamber for the invitation given to the Mercantile Community of this port to communicate with you on matters connected with the proceedings and rules of the department of which you are the head.

This Chamber entirely agrees with you in the opinion that it is as beneficial to the Mercantile Communities of China as to the Customs' department that a mutual good understanding should exist; also, that proper method in the collection of duties and regularity in the administration of revenue matters, is just as necessary to the transaction of the Merchant's business as to the proper performance of their duties by Customs' Officials, and it will gladly avail itself of the invitation now given to address you when an occasion arises, should you, on the other hand address the Chamber on the subject of new regulations, the modification of existing ones, improvement of harbour approaches, lighting of the coast, &c., &c., or any other points which you may desire to have its opinion, you may rest assured that the same will be readily given; also any suggestions which may occur to the Chamber regarding the matters which may be submitted to it; and it entirely concurs with you in the opinion that a preliminary ventilation of any intended changes will be beneficial to all who are to be affected by them.

This Chamber freely admits that, in the present condition of China, a Foreign Inspectorate of Customs confers a benefit on the trading Communities at the ports generally, by insuring thoroughly impartial treatment to all engaged in trade. It admits also that a desire has been evinced on the part of yourself, and the Commissioners acting under you, to frame the rules, under which the Customs' revenue is collected, so as to cause as little annoyance as possible, at the same time with a due regard to protection of the revenue. Still, it has on various occasions taken exception to some of these rules, as having an injurious effect on trade. It has done so more particularly with reference to fines and confiscations. The rules regarding these have been somewhat amended of late, but are still, in the opinion of this Chamber, susceptible of further modification; it therefore views with great pleasure, and derives great hopes for the future, from your assurance that you have ever objected to unnecessarily heavy fines or confiscations. At same time it is fully aware of the difficulties you have to contend with on these points, when endeavouring to instil new ideas into the minds of your Chinese colleagues; and it can well understand how tedious the process is, and how fully it must occupy your time. I conclude by expressing the satisfaction of this Chamber with the contents of your despatch generally, and the friendly tone which pervades it.

And am, sir, your obedient servant,

P. RYRIE, Chairman.

ROBERT HART, Esq.,
Inspector General of Imperial Customs, Peking.

A Year's Foreign Trade.

In the year 1867 the imports of merchandise into the United Kingdom from foreign countries amounted in value to £214,466,719; from British possessions, £60,783,134; and the import of bullion was £23,821,047, making the total of the imports into the United Kingdom £299,070,900. The exports of British and Irish produce and merchandise to foreign countries amounted to £131,302,770, and to British possessions £49,880,201; the exports of foreign and colonial produce amounted to £41,873,165, and of bullion, £14,324,517, making the total of the exports from the United Kingdom £240,381,653. To this must be added the transhipments, £6,655,527, bringing the total import and export trade of the United Kingdom in 1867 up to £546,108,080, and showing in comparison with 1866, which was the most prosperous year we have yet had, a decrease in the vast total of £51,734,403, or only 8.6 per cent. The British and Irish produce exported declined in value upwards of seven and a half millions, or 4 per cent., five millions being attributable to the depreciation of prices of cotton manufactures; the exports of foreign and colonial produce declined five millions, or 10 per cent., principally owing to the reduction in the value of raw cotton; the transhipments declined one million, the export of bullion more than seven millions, and the import of bullion more than ten millions; and the imports of merchandise declined twenty millions, or 7 per cent.; raw cotton and its altered price being here again the chief cause of the decline.—London and China Herald.

Theodore's Last Massacre.

However much has been said about King Theodore and his cruelties, it has been reserved for the "Special" of the New York Herald to furnish an account of a morning's butchery, which is, if true, quite without a parallel in the history of humanity. The "Special" thus describes the scene:—

"The massacre of the native prisoners took place two days before the battle of Fahla. Impatiently throwing his silken toga over his left shoulder, and pushing his crown from his brow backward, probably so as to have a clearer view of his victims, he hissed through his closed teeth to the native captives, saying—'Behold, I am going to slay you, because I called you and you refused; I stretched out my hand imploringly to you, and you regarded me not; you set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof. Now, I laugh at all your calamity; ha! ha! I will mock as your fear comes; when your fear comes as destruction, and your destruction comes as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish come upon you. Then, turning to his soldiers, he ordered them to separate those whom he named, and after 90 men, women, and boys had been separated from the rest, cocking his pistols, he shouted out, 'Now, who shall I destroy first?' (No answer.) 'What,' said he sarcastically, 'are there none of these princes and warriors of Ethiopia desirous of dying by the hand of Theodorus; have you all turned women when the hour of death is nigh?' 'Hold,' shouted Ras Ingerta, a Galla chief, 'I and my fellows are in your power now, but, Kassai, why did you lie to me? why, oh! why was I such an ass as to listen to your subtle words; why did I come and put my head into the lion's jaws? Oh! for one minute neck to neck with you, Kassai. I would show you how a Galla warrior meets his enemy. Give me a spear and a horse, and meet me fairly and equally here only for two minutes; I would kill you and curse you. You dare not, prisoner as I am, with chains on my limbs. I will fight you if you dared to meet me.' 'No,' returned Theodorus, with increasing warmth in his countenance, 'you tried to betray me to my enemies; spy and traitor, you shall be food for the jackal to-night. On the head of all those who have compassed me about, the mischief of their own lips shall curse them. Let them be cast into the fire, into the deep pit, that they rise not up again. Strip these fellows,' said he, 'and give me their exact number.' Their rags were torn from them, and each man, woman, and boy stood before him naked. The number of those whom he had ordered for execution was 308—275 men, 5 women, and 28 boys. He then said, 'Spear the Galla dog, Ingerta! Spear him, I say,' and Ras Ouraty Eurio, ever ready to obey Theodorus, levelled a spear and flung it at his breast. 'Thou hast well done,' said the King, as he saw the weapon had gone deep into his bosom; but Ras Ingerta plucked it out of the wound and flung it contemptuously at Theodorus' feet. 'Another one,' shouts Theodorus, 'spear him again;' and six chiefs immediately sank their weapons into his body. The wounded chief stood up bravely, and drew them all out one after another, the blood spurting from his wounds in crimson streams; when he fell down and died. Impatient at the slow progress of the execution, the King shot ten dead with his own hand, and, throwing his revolver away, he drew his sword and leaped towards the trembling prisoners. Eyeing them for a moment, he seemed to choose one for whom he entertained a perfect hatred, for he said to one—'Ah! your hour has come. I am going to drink your blood,' and, raising his sword, he cut his head off at one blow, and then drew it again across his abdomen. Theodore's face and clothes were covered with his blood, and, like a tiger who has tasted blood, this seemed to increase his fury. He foamed at the lips, and his eyes became bloodshot. After stabbing and cutting about 50 with his own hand, he rested, and ordered that his chiefs should try their hands. Many of them had personal hatred against the captives, and they proceeded with an astonishing alacrity with the awful task of massacre. Whenever he witnessed dexterous blows he applauded, but when he saw cuts given that but maimed the poor wretches, the King would spring up and demonstrate what an easy matter it was to send a head clean off the shoulders by choosing a strong, sturdy prisoner, and decapitating him with his own hand. A young and beautiful woman of high rank, perceiving that her time was coming rapidly, ran up to where Theodorus was leaning upon his dripping sword, and, throwing herself at his feet, entreated in piteous terms that he would spare her life. 'No!' thundered Theodorus; 'you came to my camp twice as a spy. Once I spared you, because one of my chiefs asked that you might be his wife. Now, by the Saviour of the world, you shall sleep below the cliffs of Magdala to-night!' So saying, while she yet bent with her face to the ground, with his whole might he delivered a blow, which almost severed her in two. Several of the European women sickened and fainted at the sight. A boy prince, son of one of the rebellious governors who was still at large, was next killed by a sweeping blow, which took his head and left arm off. In about an hour and a half from the commencement of the wholesale execution, the massacre was completed, and as fast as each one had been slain the body was carried to the edge of the cliff, and thrown down a height of 50 feet or more. At the bottom of the cliff were several great rocks, scattered here and there, and these were covered with brains and blood. A ghastly heap of corrupting flesh was all that was left of 308 human souls, who but shortly before had been the friends in captivity of the Europeans. The human shambles contained pools of blood and gore, in several places nearly a foot deep. Theodorus, having mastered his passion as the work of death was ended, turned to the European captives, and in the most urbane manner informed them that he would do the same to them if the English general did not listen to reason. From the day of the battle of Fahla to the time of his death Theodorus had not tasted a morsel of food, but had endeavoured to forget his misery and imbecility, in letting the English prisoners go, by drinking tej and arrachi. This abstinence from food accounts for the emptiness of the stomach, and emaciated appearance of the body which it presented when we found him dead near the entrance-gate, Thalurlar."

A Royal Trip to the Arctic Circle.

Her Majesty yacht Victoria and Albert, Captain his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, has recently returned to Portsmouth from a cruise beyond the Arctic circle, the purpose of which still remains one of the official mysteries. This magnificent vessel is said to be the first of her size and costliness which has made the attempt to penetrate the fiords and intricate channels of the Norwegian coast, and it is to be presumed that the object of the voyage was commensurate in importance with the risk incurred. The ship left Portsmouth on the 1st of June, and arrived at Bergen on the 4th. She remained there two or three days, while the paddle steamer Vivid, which was detached for duty as tender to the yacht during the cruise, conveyed the Prince of Leiningen and other of the officers up the Hardanger fiord. On resuming her voyage the yacht proceeded to Drondhjem, calling en route at Grandsunde and Molde. To a traveller unaccustomed to the northern latitudes the physical phenomena were most marked and interesting. After leaving Drondhjem the voyagers had the advantage—if it is an advantage—of perpetual daylight, and the mountains between that point and Hammerfest were capped with snow. The thermometer on board the ship was down to freezing point, while the sun, an early riser in these regions, was well up above the horizon at midnight. The yacht steamed slowly northward to Hammerfest, generally anchoring for the night, and afterwards rounded the North Cape, which is over 70 degrees north of the Equator, and, therefore, some four degrees within the Arctic circle. The ship remained two days at this point to coal for the homeward voyage, and then shaped her course southward, calling at Drondhjem and the Shetland Islands on her way, and arriving at Portsmouth after an absence of 28 days. The only surmise that has been expressed as to the object of the trip is that it was undertaken as a sort of trial cruise, with the view of its being repeated on some future occasion for the benefit or pleasure of the Royal Family. The only visitor of distinction on board, however, on this occasion was the Princess of Leiningen.

Peto, Betts, & Crampton's Bankruptcy.

The case of Messrs. Peto, Betts, and Crampton was concluded on July 6, before Mr. Commissioner Winslow in the Bankruptcy Court. Mr. Linklater, on behalf of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, informed the court that both the assignees and the bankrupts were now satisfied that £210,000, originally claimed from the railway company was not due, but that, on the contrary, £365,000 was due to the company from Peto, Betts, and Crampton, and £119,000 from the firm of Peto and Betts. With respect to the claim of £6,000,000, the company now felt that they might well abandon the further prosecution of their proof—not by reason of their inability to sustain it, but because it unfortunately happened, from the mode in which the affairs of the bankrupts had been conducted, that a very large sum which would have formed part of the assets of the three bankrupts had come into account with Peto and Betts, and that sums amounting to nearly £800,000, belonging to the three bankrupts, had been applied in the ordinary course of things in the discharge of liabilities of Peto and Betts. He did not throw any blame upon any one for the result, but it was a fact that the joint estate had been considerably impoverished, and that the available assets were insufficient for payment of the costs of the proceedings. It was an immaterial matter, therefore, whether the railway company claimed £365,000, or any larger sum from the joint estate, for in neither case could there be any dividend, and, unless by some good fortune in the administration of the estate a further sum could be realized, they were only pursuing shadows. But it must be understood that the railway company did not admit the principle or the accuracy of the present accounts; all they said was that it would not be to the advantage that the matter should be further pressed. As to the accounts themselves, he would remark that at no period of the year 1866, when the failure occurred, was the railway company indebted to the bankrupts in a single shilling, and that throughout the year the estates of the three and of the two were largely indebted to the railway company. The books of the firm had been admirably kept. The Commissioner granted an order of discharge, and in doing so said: "As neither the assignees nor any of the creditors oppose the bankrupts having their orders of discharge, there is no ground on which I can act in refusing them; but I wish it to be understood that I express no opinion in regard to the matters which were inquired into as to the transactions between the railway company and the bankrupts. The evidence is not before me in such a way that I can give any opinion upon it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Russia.

The strong impression created in Russia by the determination which undertook and the steadiness which finished up so promptly the Abyssinian campaign, is well reflected in the following article from the St. Petersburgh Birjeviya Vedomosti:—

"The Abyssinian war places English foreign policy in a striking light. Bold and energetic as ever, the statesmen who planned the Expedition have been amply rewarded for their venture, and will derive the greatest possible advantage from the millions invested in it. Without desiring to write a panegyric on English policy, we yet cannot help acknowledging that it is based upon a true conception of the interests of their country, and carried on with unremitting assiduity to promote the object in view. Of late England has been often reproached with apathy and indifference to current events. Her policy of non-interference people were in the habit of assuring each other had lost her the influence formerly possessed on the Continent. But England's centre of gravity no longer lies in Europe. That she exercises the closest vigilance over the interests she has really at heart is sufficiently manifest from the history of her colonies, and also from the present war, which many among us a short time ago were fain to regard as a sort of British eccentricity. In invading Abyssinia England well knew what she was about. Although certainly provoked by King Theodore, she availed herself of the opportunity to strengthen her somewhat declining prestige in Eastern Africa, and succeeded. The battle of Magdala will be an effectual set off to French preponderance, so greatly in the ascendant in those parts since the commencement of the Suez Canal. The Abyssinian Expedition affords an instructive lesson to the other Powers. We are perfectly convinced that England, were any of her vital interests violated by European States, would act as resolutely as in this African difficulty. English policy has always been distinguished by a clear notion of the real wants of the country and the immediate aims to be striven for. It is for this reason that England, as a rule, is so unwilling to meddle with the affairs of other States, and to interfere in the complicated questions called European. With her own concerns fully occupying her, she is not very apt to be enthusiastic about 'ideas,' or to aspire to a prestige which does not produce substantial advantages. She does nothing for the sake of appearances; but is ever ready to sacrifice her sons when something worth having is at stake. English policy, both internal and external, is based upon a system established some hundred years ago, and perfectly independent of the men who may temporarily compose the Government. To this consistency England, comparatively weak though she is in a military point of view, is indebted for her position at the head of the civilized world. The very reserve she practices in her relations to other States, and the methodical rigour with which she adheres to her system, enable her in an emergency to sway the decision of most of the questions agitating the world."

The paper in which this eulogy on England appears, is the one representing the St. Petersburg Exchange, and the commercial world generally. The semi-official and party journals are rather reticent upon the subject. Never solicitous to praise England, they find it hopeless to attempt anything in her dispraise on this occasion. The echo of Magdala has too powerfully reverberated in certain parts of the Continent to be drowned by criticism. And what credit are they at this moment, of all others, likely to find were they to dish up again their old maxim of England's timid indifference to foreign events, those of the East included?

A Mighty Hunter.

On the 29th May, under the above heading, we gave an extract from the Field, giving a glowing description of an encounter with elephants in Abyssinia by a Mr. Boustead. That gentleman was reported to have killed four elephants out of a herd of five. On July 31st we gave an extract from the Pall Mall Gazette contradicting the previous account, and throwing a doubt on Mr. Boustead's veracity. The subjoined letter is supposed to clear up all doubts on the subject:—

ELEPHANT SHOOTING IN ABYSSINIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "PALL MALL GAZETTE."

SIR,—Since my arrival from Abyssinia my attention has been called to a paragraph in the Pall Mall Gazette of the 5th of June last, referring to an account of a day's elephant shooting which I had in Abyssinia, written to a brother officer of my regiment who was in England, and which subsequently appeared in the Field of 11th of April last.

I regret to have to inform you that your "Zulla correspondent," in his attempt at ridicule, has misinformed you on the subject. The account of my day's sport, as it appeared in the Field, is quite correct in all its particulars. I did shoot the elephants in question—unaided, and accompanied only by a dhooly bearer of my regiment and a Shohoe guide, who carried my spare rifles. The sport and great luck I had on that occasion was very remarkable, all the more so because at that time no elephants were known to exist in that unexplored locality by any one in the force. I came across them quite unexpectedly when I was in pursuit of a lion which had been marked down for me by the Shohoe guide.

Since that occasion I have been equally fortunate in bagging other elephants with very good ivory—in the Djatchi mountains so late as the 17th of May last; I killed the first and last elephants that were killed by any one in the Abyssinian field force.—I am, sir, yours, &c.,

R. BOUSTEAD, F.R.C.S.E.,
Surgeon Abyssinian Field Force Staff.

July 9th 1868.

P.S.—Colonel Merewether, C.B., killed an elephant near Massowah before the expedition was organized, in July, 1867. This was the first elephant seen in the country.

Vertical Fire.

The experiments against the roof of the casemated iron structures at Shoeburyness, which took place on Thursday, were an agreeable variety on the eternal hammering of iron plates, and indicate that the question of vertical fire has not been lost sight of. And it is in its way a very important question. There are two portions of every ironclad which, however impenetrable its sides, are vulnerable to attack—the bottom and the deck. The one may be attacked by torpedoes; the other must be dealt with by means of vertical fire. For this reason it is highly desirable that the provision of efficient mortars should not be neglected. And by efficient mortars we mean not only mortars which will throw heavy shells to long ranges, but mortars or pieces of ordnance of some sort which can do this with a reasonable amount of accuracy. Such accuracy the present mortars can scarcely be said to possess. The practice on Thursday was unusually good for mortar practice, and yet out of sixteen shells fired at 900 yards range to lodge in a space as nearly as possible 22 feet square, only two took effect, and some few fell from 40 to 50 yards wide of the mark. In days before rifled guns were thought of, such practice as this was all very well, and even now-a-days many mortars placed about the batteries of our harbours, and firing rapidly, might, and probably would, cause serious damage to an attacking fleet; but the value of vertical fire is so great—one large shell passing through the decks of a ship would cause such terrible havoc—that it is of great importance not to allow this class of fire to fall into the background. It ought to keep pace with other artillery improvements; and we are glad, therefore, to learn—especially are we glad to learn it in view of Thursday's experiments, and the very indifferent accuracy exhibited by our existing mortars—that the Ordinance Select Committee are engaged in perfecting some rifled mortars, or rather rifled carronades, for high angle firing, which in respect of accuracy and effect will be a great improvement on the old 13-inch or 10-inch mortars. The subject is one to which we hope to return in more detail on a future occasion. As regards the vulnerability of the Plymouth fort to this species of attack it is satisfactory to learn from Thursday's experiments that the fort is secure against it. Two shells which fell on the roof and were afterwards exploded occasioned no inconvenience and caused no damage inside the fort. If forts can thus be made secure against vertical fire, and if they can at the same time deliver an effective vertical fire against shipping, they will have gained a very material point of superiority in defence.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

A bulletin has been issued from Marlborough-house, stating that the recovery of the Princess of Wales is now so far advanced that no further bulletins will be issued.

A Paris telegram states that a concession for the privilege of laying a telegraphic cable between France and America has been granted by the French Government to Baron Emile d'Erlanger and Mr. Julius Reuter for twenty years.

Military reduction is the order of the day in Austria. The Tagblatt announces that the War Minister of the Empire has ordered the immediate furlough of twenty men per company, by which a reduction in the army of 36,000 men will be effected.

Great discontent prevails at Cassel on account of the extremely oppressive measures adopted by the police. One form of persecution appears incredible. It is said that innkeepers are ordered, under a penalty, to record in their registers various particulars respecting all travellers, one being whether they are born in wedlock or illegitimate!

The Times states that the Italian journals are warmly assisting the efforts in progress to get the India mail by Brindisi, a change of route calculated to effect a saving of forty eight hours. It is also hoped that measures may soon be taken to establish a direct postal route from Lisbon to London by railway, which, if properly arranged, could it is believed, be performed in less than two-thirds of the time now occupied by sea.

Several of the large towns in Austria have protested against the Papal Allocution. The Lloyd of Pesth says:—"We shall no more tolerate the interference of Rome in our legislation than we did that of Vienna. We shall tremble as little before a council of churchmen in Rome as we did before a council of war in Vienna. A nation which has passed without wavering through the fusillades of Haynau will be able to defend its independence against the thunders of the Vatican."

The Indian papers received to-day publish what they call an amusing instance of official exactness. A native member of the Uncovenanted Service penned the following lines to his official superior:—"Honored sir, I humbly beg you excuse my not attendance office this date, cause I got a boil as per margin." In the margin of the letter a sketch of the boil was drawn out, and the writer went on further to say, "the breadth of paper being short I have planned the boil small, but it is dubble the size."

At a recent meeting of some of the gentlemen interested in a charity called the "Jewish Blind," a remarkable case was brought under the notice of the president, Sir Benjamin Phillips. A woman (stone blind) has been in receipt of a pension for about eight years. During a heavy storm that prevailed some weeks since she became suddenly aware, as she expressed it, of a "glimmer of light," and from that time to the present her vision has improved daily; perfect eyesight is now restored to her. The poor woman expresses herself as having been "greatly shocked" at the thunder and lightning.

The marriage of Menotti Garibaldi to Italia Bedeschini, which has just taken place at Bologna, seems to have awakened considerable enthusiasm in that city. According to the Diritto, the people came forth in crowds to cheer the young couple; addresses were presented to them; and music was played in their honour throughout the day. In the evening, when they went to the theatre, "Garibaldi's Hymn" was called for, and given several times, amid cheers for Garibaldi himself, Rome, Italy, and the newly-married pair. Immediately afterwards Menotti Garibaldi set out for Caprera. Garibaldi, owing to ill-health, was unable to be present at the marriage ceremony.

THE LUTHER MEMORIAL.—The Luther Monument at Worms is described as a magnificent work of art, combining great size with rich variety of design. It consists of eleven statues grouped round the gigantic likeness of Luther. Wickliffe, Petrus Waldus, Savonarola, and Huss are seated on four pillars at the corners of the pedestal of the principal figure, and seven other statues are distributed around a granite vase forty feet square. Around this square is a battlemented balustrade, and seated in the centre of each of three sides of this are three majestic women, representing Magdeburg, Augsburg, and Spires. The balustrade is decorated with escutcheons of twenty-four other German cities, and the pedestal with scenes from Luther's life.

The reporters (says the Pall Mall Gazette) must surely have injured a striking antithesis in Mr. Disraeli's speech on the Abyssinian expedition, where we read—"Over this land he guided cavalry and infantry, and—what was stranger than all—he led the elephants of Asia, bearing the artillery of Europe, over African passes which might have startled the trapper and appalled the hunter of the Alps." For Alps we obviously want Alleghanies, both to correspond to the trapper and to carry the imagination in triumph to the fourth quarter of the world. One is even tempted to conjecture that the cheering in the House may have rendered inaudible a complementary clause something like "for the punishment of atrocities worthy only of the cannibals of Polynesia."

PROPOSED RAILWAY BETWEEN SCOTLAND AND IRELAND.—The Northern Whig says:—"Two gentlemen—L. Livingston Macassey, C.E. and William Scott, C.E., and Fellow of the Royal Scottish Society of Arts—have just published a report on a proposed railway tunnel between Scotland and Ireland. We cannot pronounce any opinion as to the feasibility of the scheme, though the two authors of the report, after having, as they say, thoroughly investigated the matter, have no doubt as to its practicability. As, however, the possibility of making a tunnel from Dover to Calais has been seriously thought of, it is not altogether unnatural that there should be a proposition to make a railway tunnel to join Scotland and Ireland, and save squeamish travellers the sickly horrors of even the short sea passage."

A NEGRO DUEL.—The belief fostered by a certain school of ethnologists that the negro race is incapable of the highest civilisation has been decisively refuted by an event which has lately taken place. We give it in the simple words of the American chronicler:—"Two negroes fought a duel near Savannah, Georgia, on the morning of the 3rd of June. Both were formerly slaves. They went through all the required formalities. The seconds tossed up for choice of position; and the principals having been placed fifteen paces apart, the word to fire was given. Simultaneously they discharged double-barrelled shot guns, loaded with buck shot. The challenger was mortally wounded, and died in a few hours. His antagonist was not hurt. These men were both members of the Union League. One of them had accused the other of being a traitor. This charge was branded as a lie, and resulted in the duel." The Savannah Republican says that "they were perfectly cool and collected, and exhibited no sign of fear, but stood with undaunted front."

NOTICE.
CHIANG-TING-CHUN and others having intimated their intention to establish a Rice market in the west gate of TOONG-KOO-CHIK, at Kook-fow, Canton, the District Magistrate addressed the Superintendent of Harbours on the subject, who, after making enquiries, made a report in favour of the proposed project. It therefore has received the countenance of the authorities, and a notification has been issued.

This will be a step of great importance in the interest of rice dealers, and will be a great boon to the public at large. Rice merchants not being able in future to monopolize the trade, whilst the poorer classes can easily make purchases at moderate prices.

FORTY YEARS' USE OF THESE MEDICINES
(Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicines)
By the public has proved their efficacy and virtues, and the truth of Mr. MORISON'S system as to the cure of diseases. Being composed only of vegetable matter or medicinal herbs, they are harmless to the most tender age or weakest frame, under every stage of suffering; the most pleasant in their operation; and the most certain in searching out the root of any complaint. Besides cleansing the great highway of the body the bowels—they act copiously on the kidneys, the liver, and the skin. A sense of relief in the whole system is felt very shortly after they have been taken,—the blood flows more evenly, the heart beats more regularly, and sleep is given to those long deprived of it. The medicines consist of three sorts. No. 1 Morison's Pills; No. 2 Morison's Pills. In boxes at 7½d., 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.; family packets, 11s. each; also the Vegetable Aperient Powders, 1s. 1½d. per box.
